Injured Spouse Claimers Consent

When married taxpayers file a joint return and one spouse has not paid child or spousal support, or certain federal debts, such as student loans, all or part of the overpayment shown on the joint return may be used to satisfy the past due debt of the delinquent spouse. The non-obligated spouse may be entitled to a refund of his/ her part of the overpayment if that individual:

Is not required to pay to pay the past due amount

Received and reported income, such as wages, taxable interest, etc on the joint return

Made and reported payments such as withheld federal income taxes or estimated taxes on the joint return

To file this claim the non-obligated spouse must file Form 8379, Injured Spousal Allocation and attach it to the Form 1040. More time is needed by the IRS or State Tax Authority to process these returns, therefore when filing the claim be aware that your refund can be delayed.

By signing below I am stating I understand that by claiming for Injured Spouse my refund may be delayed and the amount of refund may be decreased.
